Words of Our Beloved Prophet

October 7th celebration

After the transmission ceremony, our Beloved Prophet talked to the few hundred Raelians who came from all over Europe to celebrate with him the 32nd anniversary of the second encounter he had with our Creators. Here are his words, taken from notes:

« Such beautiful moments together, we could stop now as the most important has been done, the connection with the Elohim. You stimulated me several times... the beauty of Emmanuel's meditation, then the moment spent waiting for the transmission which is so important for those who are about to do it as well as for all of you who have done it before. It is like a love date with the Elohim. We wait for the moment to arrive and we shouldn't go into the habit of it, thinking while going to a Raelian Meeting 'hum, I will have to wait again'. Our life is a permanent wait. Our life is made of a permanent wait for important events that we can catch or not. But we spend our life waiting. There are some who are born and wait for their death, without having done anything for anyone else, without having given love to their brothers and sisters, without having tried to change something on earth. We can eat, drink, sleep and wait for death or we can stand up and say 'I will do something with the time that passes by', because it passes by, whether we do something or nothing. It feels so much better to see the time passing by, or rather to see ourselves passing through time, because we are the ones passing through time, time does not pass by.

When we do something - and you are all doing something-, then you are something or rather someone. Why we are here, this great question that imbeciles never ask. Every intelligent person will once in their life wonder "why am I here? Why am I on Earth?" We can look for the answer in traditional philosophies, in a lot of things and at some point we find an answer that satisfies us, that changes our life but then it falls back again. For some it lasts a few weeks or months for it is so difficult to find a truth that fulfills us eternally. There are many temporary spiritual solutions. There are among us people who went from one philosophy to an other, from one explanation to an other and who travel, and it is beautiful to travel. And one day they have the privilege to find an answer that, if they are aware of it and make it theirs completely, will fulfill them forever because it is the truth. The other ones can feel satisfactory because they resemble the truth temporarily, but one despairs quickly when realizing that the truths that could have originally been real, like the message of Jesus was real at the beginning, all the messages of the great prophets, are transformed with time and lose their essence of truth, betrayed by the ones who were in charge of passing it on, by the people who were supposed to be the guardians of the verb of the grand prophets. "Love thy neighbor as thy self" or "if you are hit, love your enemy". Those beautiful sentences have been betrayed by people who started the Inquisition, who burned believers alive, who became rich with the money of the Infidels, all that we know and that makes us say "what am I doing here? It is not it..." And one day we find the real truth, the one that was given by all the prophets and that was then betrayed. It is the concern of all prophets to make sure as much as possible, even if the task is somewhat pointless, that those who will carry on the flame don't betray what they said. I see constantly that what I say gets betrayed, even though I am still alive. I then understand how hard it will be when I will be dead. It is great that there are videos and that what I say is recorded. No one will be able to say that I did not say it because it is being recorded. It is a little advantage I have that all I say is recorded. I hope that this time the message of the Elohim will not be betrayed and that you will make sure they are respected. I count on you to say "wait, wait, we must watch the videos again. You are saying the opposite of what he said then, let's watch the videos". You will be the one who will have to stand up because maybe some guides will hide the videos and will keep them hidden like the secret archives of the Vatican while saying "no, no, that's not it, here is what you must understand" and the one who are alive then will have to stand up and say "play the video where he talked about it because it was very clear".

This happiness that we have to be directly linked to the Elohim, directly attached to the truth, and to be... without having to add anything after this word... be! You can feel this direct link with the Elohim, I think that you can feel it. You don't even need me. I am like a 'sign panel' showing the direction. You are directly linked to the Elohim because you made yours their message and because you can feel directly linked to them and that's enough. We can do things together. Of course it is wonderful to be in a team and to not be completely alone with the truth on earth. But the essence of this message is that you can be alone, linked to the Elohim, linked to the creators and you can say 'I am just, I act for love and peace on earth whatever other may say, whether they are with us or against us'. It may happen that some guides or high ranked individuals in the movement misjudge you. It is not important. What is important is to have the message in you and say 'I am amongst the just'. And one day the Elohim will tell me if I was wrong. That is a direct link you have with the Elohim; a link inside of you.

Who are you? You are amazing human beings. Be aware of it! To be together is extraordinary! Be aware of how amazing it is! To be in it together at the same time. You are here with me but you could be elsewhere. You have the freedom to get up any second if you have the feeling that you may feel better elsewhere, that you would feel more or be more. Then you stay here because, after consideration, the Elohim always speak to your consciousness and judgment, never to your faith. So you say yes, I am well, it works for me, it pleases me. It makes me content.

You should do that every day. You cannot put it all in question or it would be a difficult revolution to live on a daily bases on every aspect/plan, but on all the big subjects and mostly when it concerns the philosophy you chose, it is very healthy to wake up every morning and question 'is it what I chose? Am I still as moved as at the beginning?' The word 'move' is right. 'Does it still make me move?' If not, don't betray the messages. The strongest way to betray the messages is to fake being with it while no longer owning it and no longer being owned by it. So when you don't feel it in you, place it on a table and take some distance for a while. Go see the Buddhists. But don't live with the messages if you don't completely feel it in your heart, completely, being like a lover who see his fiancée for the first time, a handsome girl or boy that you met the night before and to be that impatient, enjoying this wonderful wait with a bouquet of flowers thinking 'they will come'. This is what we did earlier before the transmission. We must feel that all the time. It is a love story before all, a story between the Elohim and us... a story of love!

Rael and Philippe, Swiss NG

They are our lovers and we are their lovers, lovers of the truth!

How much they must love us for giving it to us! They do not need us. Love is when we don't need the others and when we give without expecting. They don't even expect any acknowledgement from us! They say: "If you want to make the embassy make it. If you don't feel like it, too bad we will not come." They are expecting nothing and that is why it is so wonderful to want to give them everything. People who really love us expect nothing from us. When we are expecting something from someone, it is trade. When we love we want to give without expecting anything. If we receive, it is wonderful, but that is not the goal. The goal is to give and to give more and to spend our life giving love. We are lucky because we have the messages which allow us to deeply be, because it gives us the means to love our creators, to love other human beings, those who love us –of course it feels good to be with other Raelians who share our philosophy and it is good to be together- but to also give love to those who hate us. It is the most beautiful thing and I will never say it to you enough. To give love to those who judge us, to those who look at us and say 'the cult'. Those are the ones we need to love even more because 'forgive them they do not know what they are doing'. If they knew, they would not behave this way. To give love to those who love us is easy, but to give love to those who hate us is our reason to be on this planet. It is the most beautiful part of the mission that the Elohim gave us. When we sincerely start, not in a fake way, sincerely to be capable to give love or to have a look full of compassion and comprehension for those who judge us, who despise us and who want to destroy us; then our lives become a permanent enchantment. We are not always with them, one has to be masochistic to spend lots of time with those who despise us, but when we meet them, we give them love. When we meet together, it is paradise on earth. When we are alone and that we tell ourselves at the end of the day: 'I gave love all day and tomorrow I will wake up saying today I will give love to those who need it the most which is those who critic and those who despise me' then you feel well; and you really are.

Souriez si vous voulez être...

It is easy. It is just a matter of deciding. As I told you during the seminars this summer, happiness is a decision. It does not come from elsewhere, from the sky, from the messages. It only comes from you. It is a decision. If you decide to be unhappy, you will be unhappy. If you decide to be happy you will be happy. The fool says "when I will be happy I will smile", the wise says "I will smile to be happy"

Smile if you want to be happy.

A few of the people present shared what they were experiencing and our Beloved Prophet added:

What you must understand is that you are all exceptional and that it is not because someone is exceptional that he does not fall. But it is because someone is exceptional that he gets back up. To be exceptional does not mean to not fall and fall again and again. To be exceptional is to always get back up. To be exceptional is also, when we see people falling, to offer them a hand, to offer them your hand always, 10 times, 100 times; to always say that the new being that is in you is capable of getting back up and our strength is equal to the strength of our weakest elements. That is why we must love them and offer them a hand and not turn our back on them if they have difficulties or are going through a tough time. This would be real love. When all is good it is easy. But when people have big problems, when they want to die, when they don't feel good, when they take shit that devils put their way -which destroys them too by the way-, that is when we must offer a hand and say 'you got back up before, you are capable of getting back up again'. I count on you to surround the weakest amongst you.

It is true that one can take the fact of being a Raelian in France, Switzerland or Belgium very negatively. Those countries have an unacceptable discrimination. At the same time we can consider it as a privilege. Bravo to Kimbangu for having said so. What is special is to be in a difficult country and to not leave it. We can leave but it is powerful to say no, I will get them to respect my rights. I will get them to respect the diamond of my truth and the right to love it here with my rights even if they are trashed by some. I will be myself and it will be the problem of the unconscious, of those who don't want to let me be myself. It is their problem. I will remain myself. It is beautiful! It is also what I told you at the seminar this summer: the means to be exceptional. We are not exceptional by staying in our room protected from it all and not talking to anyone. There we are nothing, we are not. But by mingling with others, with the hostile ones, the disrespectful ones, the ones who destroy, the drugs, the things that come to destroy our brains, that is when we can become exceptional. We are capable at any given moment to abandon our philosophy to be like everyone else; so that no one points a finger at us, to get back into drugs, to forget the worries we may have and how difficult life sometimes seems to be. Or we can decide to be exceptional by living our philosophy, besides everything that goes wrong, all the problems there is, aware of the fabulous society project. There are many politicians on earth but they don't have a society project. They manage catastrophes. They manage the unmanageable that they created. But no one ever brings a society project. Indeed we have one that is fabulous and that touches all the aspects of the human society. It is there on top of that to save humanity, including those who despise us. That is something exceptional. We are there for the 144,000. But that is not enough. We are here to save the others, the 6 billiards others. We want to save them too and that is exceptional. So when some people are sinking, we must be there for them. That is what I wanted to tell you. If there are some amongst us who do not give signs for a while, it is time to shake the tree, to ask why we don't see them anymore, what happened to them, to contact them, to call them. If no one says anything, all of a sudden we hear it, it has happened before; we hear that someone committed suicide, like Colombo. There are people who didn't react fast enough and ask why we don't see him anymore. We can all fall. We can all get back up. But we need hands being offered to us. Help each other. It has been told before; it is not just words on paper.

As Jean Marie says in his song, we are not many around the prophet. Each and everyone is precious, each little screw in the mechanics that you are is precious. This mechanics has the precision of a Swiss clock and you are the little cog in the wheel of this precise mechanics. To love each other when we are in the same room, is easy. But when there is someone whom you haven't heard from for a while, whose emails you don't receive anymore, whom you don't see anymore, go see him. Let's make sure that everyone of us is well because when we are here we can only be well. It is when we back down, when we are separated from the messages, from the Elohim, that we can feel lonely. We are living an amazing period. We don't need to travel much. A computer and a little microphone and we can talk to each other every day.

Love each other. Stay in contact always. We are so precious for the Elohim, each and every one of us.

Have you told someone that you love him/her today? If you haven't it is not too late. Enjoy it now for it will be too late when you will be by yourself in your car. You have people next to you on your right and on your left. It doesn't mean that you will sleep with them. Tell them that you are honored that they live at the same time as you do. Look at each other and hold each other's hand and tell each other 'I am honored to live at the same time as you do and I love you' 'I don't know you but I love you. I really love the being that you are.' Say it to each other. If tears are shed let them fall. It is beautiful. You can even kiss each other on the cheek. That is not sexual. It just means that we are happy. 'I don't know you but I am honored to live at the same time as you do and I love you.'

Say it, feel it, every day. Some people get married and live with a partner and don't say it to each other anymore for years. I know people who have been married for 10 years who said it to each other for the first 6 months and then nothing for 10 years. It is unbelievable. I don't know how it is possible. It is as if I brushed my teeth 10 years ago and I didn't need it anymore. It would smell actually ☺. There are things that we must do every day, like drinking water. It is as necessary as drinking, eating and sleeping everyday -not when it is sexual- but to wake up every morning and say 'today I will meet someone that I don't know and I will tell that person that I love him/her.' That is a beautiful challenge. When we know the person it is easy. It can be your boss or anyone whom you work with. It does not mean doing a declaration on your knees, which is not it. It means saying: "Sir, I work with you and you have many employees. You are a great boss and I like being with you." that is love. You may be getting a raise but that is not the point ☺

It is as important if you are the boss. There are some here among us. May you look at your employees and tell them that you appreciate their collaboration and that they are wonderful beings. It means that we love the human being and that is beautiful. It will brighten your days and you will feel good.

Imagine for a moment that you have a boss who tells you that. How will you feel afterwards? It is the fantastic power that you have, the gift that you have in your guts that most do not give. We are like an old scrounge, we keep it. Give it! Love unlike gold and silver, the more we give, the more we have. You can tell 50 persons 'I love you'... you will still have some. The wallet is never empty, so give it.

About our commitment.

A great Greek philosopher was used to say to people who would come to him claiming to want to be a philosopher to hand a herring to a string and to walk across the city with it. It is somewhat easier to walk with the messages although it is about the same. What the philosopher wanted to say is that an individual in a city, a respectable man with a normal life who wants to become a philosopher and who walks across the street with a dried fish attached to a string, people will say for sure 'what happened to you? Are you crazy? Have you been drinking?' It is then that the individual starts to apprehend real philosophy. People will start asking essential questions. 'I do this only so that you ask me questions' 'to know'

'I did this to listen to my being' 'a philosopher advised me'.... it is interesting! So think about it when you walk around with the symbol or the messages. It is easier to wear the symbol around your neck than a herring☺.

GMO dinner

On October 6th, our Beloved Prophet took part in a dinner organized by the European Raelians in a restaurant in Lausanne where the food served was either genetically modified or susceptible of containing genetically modified nutrients. His enthusiasm in doing so was to show His total confidence in these produce and to remind the public that these foods are the only solution to comfortably feed the entire planet.

The task was no easy feat for Antoine to accomplish for he had the responsibility of finding the basic foods in a country where, though many of the produce are currently approved, the phobia of GMOs diffused by the Swiss media is such that the demand is practically non-existent and therefore the grocery stores do not sell these items.

Dear Sir,

Thank you for your request. Although certain GMO products are approved, to our knowledge it is not possible to purchase such products either in Switzerland or in France. This is mainly due to some Non-Governmental Organization (NGO) campaigns. We regret not being able to help you in your search. Best Wishes,

Jan Lucht

Fortunately, the problem was solved thanks to the anti-GMO websites that kindly provided the black list of products that we were looking for ☺

The nearly 200 Raelians who gathered that evening evidently had a lot of pleasure in feasting GMO and more so having the privilege of being with the last of the Prophets who shared His thoughts before eating. His words were jotted down:

This evening, as you know, we celebrate several events but the fact is that we always celebrate, everything is a good reason to celebrate ☺ Time goes by fast and we must wake up each morning wondering what we will celebrate today. If we wait once a year to celebrate it can be very boring! We celebrate my birthday and October 7th as well but I requested that this evening be special, thanks to Phillipe's friend whose name is Donato. I had wished that we did something together to express our pro-GMO values therefore this evening we have a GMO meal that Donato agreed to prepare for us. We forewarned him that the media would probably not be kind to him but he said that he wasn't bothered by it, stating: "I do as I please to the people who come eat at my restaurant and I especially do whatever they request." So he accepted despite the pressure from some journalists. It feels great to see people like him, to see revolutionaries. This meal is therefore made from genetically modified foods or clones. Cloned products can easily be found in plants because plants, you may recall, are essentially reproduced by cloning. Allan, who specializes in vines, can explain this to you. The flowers that you buy are all clones. We can even find cloned animals that are consumed in some countries. It does not cause any health problems obviously and the genetically modified foods that we found, thanks to an anti-GMO black list, are in fact in our pink list which made it easy for us to find. They provided us with a list of the food they cannot guarantee that there are no GMOs. So this evening, we will eat mostly products that contain GMOs and that represent no danger whatsoever for human consumption.

Some pretend that these modified genetic codes can be dangerous for us. But our digestive system does not make the difference between the DNA of a carrot that is genetically modified from one that is not. Regardless, it is a genetic code different from ours and will be broken down and digested. To say that a genetically modified food can alter our genetic code is like saying that eating a carrot that has a different genetic code from ours will alter our genetic code. This is obviously wrong. We do not become carrots by eating carrots, beets, or turnips ☺ Digestion breaks down the molecules of the foods that we eat and whether it's a natural or modified DNA, it does not change a thing.

What is the difference between natural and genetically modified plants or flowers?

Do you know what these are? They look like grapes but they are not grapes. They are the original kiwis, as they were prior to the natural selection that took place over the centuries. The kiwi is a genetically modified fruit that has gone through long processes done by farmers. And the same goes for everything you eat. The original South American corn plants were very small, wild apples and wheat were 'selected' over the centuries. We kept the biggest ones and we ended up with plants that we can recognize today. They are genetically modified organisms through the selection and the breeding of selected plants. The most astonishing is undoubtedly the dog, or rather dogs. They all derive from the wolf. Through very long selections from the original wolf, the St- Bernard, the Chihuahua, and the dog with folded skin that we want to iron out were created. Let us imagine that we take a wolf and that the next day in a laboratory, through genetically modified experiments, BB creates a dog with an indented and ugly nose. Everybody would shout "disgusting! Look at what they did to this poor animal!" But if it is done through the generations it is not a problem.

I recently saw on the Internet that there is a contest for the ugliest dog in the world. The winner is a cross between a Chinese punk dog that has its tongue sticking out on the side and another dog equally ugly with globular eyes. This dog is extremely popular in Hollywood where many celebrities own one and absolutely adore it. One must have a lot of love and compassion for such ugly animals. If BB had created this animal in a laboratory from a wolf everyone would have expressed disgust and felt sorry for the dog stating that such experiments must stop. But because this dog is the product of centuries of selection everyone is fine with it. It is purely and simply absurd and there are no other words to explain this. Prejudice and anti-science are all there is to it and this example can also be applied to human beings. One could be born without limbs and not be a clone and everyone would say that it's wonderful and express love and compassion. But if a baby was born and cloning or genetic modification was used to make it flawless everyone would be up and arms and see it as a monster even if the baby was perfectly normal. This reaction is triggered because the baby was created scientifically and in people's eyes, this is a crime. We, Raelians, are against prejudice and for intelligence and this is precisely what we fight for.

Everything that we will eat this evening will be broken down by digestion and only what is needed to build, such as building our own DNA, will be used by our body. Our DNA does not allow a foreign DNA to insert itself and this is a scientific truth.

I am happy to celebrate October 7th in Switzerland, soil of tolerance, respect for the minorities, and freedom. It is a great joy to be here as opposed to being in a country where minorities are mistreated and not even allowed to exist. You are privileged to live in this country where no one points their finger at you and where the media does not defame you. This is why I'm always happy to come to Switzerland...

Defamation in Switzerland

I hope that you caught the sarcasm at the end of the last paragraph regarding Switzerland. This was said in reference to many defamatory articles written against us, some of which go as far as claiming that our philosophy preaches pedophilia.

Only a few days ago, the 'Illustré Swiss magazine went a step farther by using a list of angels that they pretend to have and by claiming that some are minors and have a pink feather... suggesting that the pink feather is evidence that we tolerate pedophilia! Incredible but true.

Below is the text that our Beloved Prophet published in response to the defamation and it will be distributed in mail boxes in Switzerland in order to put an end to these unhealthy rumors...

Reply to the diffamation by the Swiss magazine 'Illustré

Following the flier sent to 700,000 French Swiss residents explaining the lies from the media and stating that the Raelian Religion not only does not preach pedophilia but also actively fights against this mental disease by preaching a modernized sex education developed by sexologists and pedopsychologists (one that would emphasize initiation to the principle of pleasure and prevention of pedophilia), the 'Illustré Swiss magazine thought of adding a layer of defamation by writing that "among Rael's angels there are some minors of 11 and 13 years of age wearing a pink feather and being the victims of sexual pressure."

After the creation of the website mediashit.org which denounces how the information is manipulated by the media, the reaction by the media-liars was predictable. The thought that the media would suddenly blandish Raelians and apologize for their lies never crossed our mind when sending out this mass mailing. Quite the contrary! We knew that instead the media would go down one notch in their defamation and this is what we had hoped would happen so that the population would clearly see their prevarication. And it worked! This action will undoubtedly educate the people on how the media manipulates the information.

The truth about the Order of Angels and the minors who are part of it is not what the media claims and if serious and respectful journalists were truly invested by a simple and basic ethics consisting in verifying the source of their information before publishing it this ordeal and their exposure to ridicule could have been prevented.

What is the Truth? Rael's Order of Angels is an organization that promotes femininity, respect, and equal rights to women. Its members actively work to feminize society in a way that includes absolute non-violence and education to sensibility. All women are adults.

Minors who wish to join the Order of Angels benefit from a special status which compels them to wear a black feather meaning that no sexual activity is authorized during Raelian gatherings. They are welcomed solely through written parental consent. But outside the gatherings and in their private lives they are no different from all other adolescents in society, catholic or other, and are free to have the sex life that they wish. You may recall that according to the most recent scientific studies the average age when one discovers his/her sexuality is around 12 years old.

The minors who are part of Rael's Order of Angels and who wish to have no sexual relations before they become adults may wear a pink feather in addition to the black feather and this will mean that they will have no sexual relations at all before adulthood. This is a great relief for their parents who no longer need to worry, thanks to this "chastity vow" which will prevent any possible accident that responsible parents dread.

As we can see we are far from the defamatory statements made by l'Illustré magazine under the pen of pseudo-journalist Christian Rappaz. In Truth, contrary to the image that these media-liars wish to convey, Raelian members of the Order of Angels who are minor are encouraged to practice sexual abstinence until they become adults! A practice that not even conservative Catholics come close to engage in.

Let this be known all around you because even if our lawyers will demand a right of response and file lawsuits for defamation, there is a strong chance that these media-liars will do all they can to hide the Truth and even if compelled by judges they may still publish the right of response in the most discreet way.

To conclude, let it be known that Raelians have the utmost respect for bona fide and genuine Christians and Muslims and the aforementioned flier was, in no way, an attempt to attack their personal integrity but rather a denunciation of the abuse of their clergy and some of their fanatics, something visible enough for any intelligent person to be aware of (see www.nopedo.org). Moreover, the website www.miege.net, which contains some photos that may have been shocking to some people of the Catholic faith, is not a Raelian website but one that belongs to a Swiss citizen who is free to display whatever he wants. The Raelian Movement is against any form of censorship and whenever its members decide to create blogs or personal websites they are free to do so even if we do not embrace their ideas and are solely responsible for the legal ramifications of their acts.

Lastly, among the plethora of lies written in the article published in l'Illustré magazine it is said that Rael is denied sojourn in Valais which is completely untrue. He was simply illegally denied the right of residency (permit B) which is guaranteed to any French citizen who is given a job offer. Rael appealed the decision before the Valais State Council and if this court does not endorse the appeal and recognize this discrimination, he will take this case to the Federal and European courts. Far from being denied the right to stay in Valais, like any tourist who has the right to stay 3 months in Switzerland, Rael will be in Miege at the end of October to officially launch His wine prepared in the Caves du Verseau. This too could have easily been verified by l'Illustré magazine...

You can also watch the Raelian Movement's position on pedophilia and Rael's words on the subject directly by going to our French television site: <http://fr.raelnews.tv> that Cameron recently put in place. For English, you can find our videos at www.raelnews.tv and for all other languages it will come very soon, promise!

The latest video posted two days ago shows our Beloved Prophet in His vineyard in Valais... more on this subject in the next Contact ☺

Most of our videos can also be found on youtube at: <http://www.youtube.com/profile?user=raeltv>

For your info, the Clitoraid video has already been watched 60,000 times... not bad isn't?

If you have talent in video editing and you wish to help in that area or if you have time to help managing our video archives which are full of treasures and that we would love to have online as much as possible, let us know at Raelianews... Thanks ☺

The World bank

Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala, has just been appointed as the new director of the World Bank. After a few years as Finance minister in Nigeria, she returns to the World Bank where she has already been working for about twenty years. The President of the World Bank said in his nomination letter that she has been highly involved into the reduction of the debt of Nigeria, helping her country to cancel 18 billion dollars from the debt owed to the Club of Paris.

When learning about her nomination, Rael made the following statement:

It will be interesting to see how Ngozi Okonjo-Iweala behaves when she is in charge of the World Bank which is mainly a tool of domination for the imperialist and colonialist powers; we shouldn't place the mention 'ex'-before the words "imperialist" and "colonialist" as these powers are still in place economically.

If she would claim the immediate payment of the debt owed to the third world, she would have all our support... yes, I am talking about the debt owed by the imperialist and colonialist countries, including the interests, for the genocides and slavery damages which are ten times bigger than the so-called debt of the poor countries.

The partial cancellation of the debt of Nigeria is not even a victory as it only happens as a reward to those who bend and comply with the models imposed by the imperialists and colonialists through their tool which is the World Bank.

If the "World Bank" was really independent and efficient, it would immediately request a change in the USA politics as the USA is the country with the biggest debt in the world. It keeps financing wars and illegal occupations while surviving economically by illegally printing billions of a dollar that has no real value anymore. When a "poor" country does the same, it is punished immediately...

The World Bank just like the UN have lost their credibility since they don't even have a democratic representation. The votes of the countries are not proportional to their population. On top of that only the biggest imperialistic powers have a right to veto, a right to be at the Security Council or, among other things, the right to possess hundreds of thousands of nuclear missiles while condemning those who would dare to develop one like Iran.

If the USA and France have the right to have thousands of them, every country should have the same right. If the USA has the right to print each night billions of dollars, all countries should be able to do the same.

But the super powerful countries give themselves all the rights because they have military superiority.

This is colonialism by essence. Oppressed people should rebel because it is only with rebellion that things can change as the end of the Roman Empire proved it.

When injustice is imposed by force by a rich minority onto a huge majority of poor people, the financing of military domination and insurgent control becomes too heavy for the imperialists and their bubble ends up exploding. This is what the admirable countries that are Afghanistan and Irak are now demonstrating and it is only the beginning. It is encouraging to see the USA hesitating to attack Iran because they already don't have the means anymore to finance their crimes in Iraq and Afghanistan. This is where the World Bank should intervene and sanction the USA. However it is not doing it because it is only a puppet.

It is time for dominated countries to unite like Chavez is starting to promote it, in order to replace these ghost entities that are the UN and the World Bank, by organizations which would have real democratic power based on the number of inhabitants and not on the right of the richest. The latter wouldn't have exclusive rights anymore to possess certain weapons that other cannot have and they wouldn't have exclusive veto rights or rights to print money illegally to finance their artificial domination.

Europeans have become masters in the art of financing their domination with the money of colonized and oppressed peoples: from the pillage of the gold of the Incas, Mayas and Aztecs, to slavery, colonization, including the most diverse genocides as the one of North American Peoples, called by mistakes the Indians, and finally to stealing the raw materials through an economical colonialism. Everything is good for this European minority to keep its domination on the other races and peoples. They are ready to do anything so that nothing changes and they can keep on dominating the world, like creating puppet organizations as the United Nations and the World Bank, giving them a legal existence by creating the myth of an international community.... The pseudo "International Community" has value for them only when it works towards maintaining their domination. But if Palestinian people, Lebanese people or Venezuelan people elect democratically individuals who do not satisfy them and who are hostile to them, then their beautiful theoretical values are gone in pieces and their desire for more power and gain is finally made obvious to all.

In other words, when they say " we wish to keep on helping the Third World for ever", it means " we wish to stay the rich and dominating countries for ever", because if things were really evolving, the rich persons who give wouldn't always be the same. Everything else is cover-up and make-up to hide the systematic organization of the continuous domination of the imperialism and of the colonization by the Europeans and their American descendants.

In the same line, the AFP mentioned at the beginning of the month that the governor of the Central Bank of South Africa expressed doubts about the plan to create a unique currency in Africa, saying that it would be unfair for countries like Zimbabwe that apply a politics on economics that is controversial to benefit from it.

Rael made the following comment : "It is obvious that all the ministers and presidents in the artificial countries created by colonization, as well as the governors of the central banks of these same entities, can only be against the UKA and the Afro, for the exact same reason : they would lose their job and the power that enable them to benefit from corruption."

Jimmy Carter Honorary Guide

The United States tortures prisoners in violation of international law, former President Carter said Wednesday.

He also said that the U.S. "has abandoned the basic principle of human rights." "I don't think it. I know it," Carter told CNN's Wolf Blitzer.

"We've said that the Geneva Conventions do not apply to those people in Abu Ghraib prison and Guantanamo, and we've said we can torture prisoners and deprive them of an accusation of a crime to which they are accused." In an interview with the BBC, Carter called Vice President Dick Cheney "a disaster for our country" who exerts too much influence on the president.

Carter also said President Bush creates his own definition of human rights.

On October 4 an article in The New York Times confirmed Carter's declarations disclosing the existence of secret Justice Department memorandums supporting the use of "harsh interrogation techniques." These include "head-slapping, simulated drowning and frigid temperatures," according to the Times.

Mr. Carter, who won a Nobel Peace Prize in 2002, also criticized Mr. Bush for having "zero peace talks" in Israel. Mr. Carter said the administration "abandoned or directly refuted" every negotiated nuclear arms agreement, as well as environmental efforts by other presidents.

For his recent stance against the torture authorized by the American government, and for his opposition to the policies of President George Bush, former President Jimmy Carter has been honored by the Raelian movement.

"For his courageous position of putting truth before politically correct nationalism, I decided to award Jimmy Carter the title of Honorary Guide," said Rael.

He added that Carter's extensive efforts to eradicate AIDS and other diseases in Africa, his many humanitarian projects, and his profound understanding of science and technology were other factors contributing to the honor.

"This is the sort of person who would be eligible to run as a candidate in the form of government Raelians want – a geniocracy, or government by a college of elected geniuses," Rael explained. "Carter's presidency was thwarted because he couldn't get his policies through Congress, which unfortunately contains many people with mediocre minds. A group of geniuses democratically elected and governing collectively is what's needed. In fact, it's the only form of government that can save this planet."

Trained in nuclear physics, Carter has one of the highest IQs of any American president, living or dead. He has written many books, one of which details his views on the compatibility of science and spirituality. And along with liberal views and high regard for the truth, Carter has something else in common with Raelians: He believes in UFOs.

In fact, he freely admits publicly to seeing one himself. Several decades ago, long before he became president, Carter was waiting to give a speech at the Lion's Club meeting in a small Georgian town when he happened to look up at the sky and see what he later described as "a self-luminous object, as bright as the moon." He said the object was a silent blue disc that approached and receded, then repeated the cycle.

One of the very few American political figures to publicly admit to such a sighting while in office, Carter reported the incident to the International UFO Bureau in 1973, when he was Governor of Georgia. In his handwritten report, made a few years after the sighting, he said he observed the object for 10 to 12 minutes and that its color changed from blue to red. It "came close, moved away, came close, then moved away," he wrote.

Creating life in the laboratory

By Rebecca Morelle, Science reporter, BBC News

The race to create life version 2.0 is under way.

And rumours abound that closest to the finish line in constructing a lifeform in the laboratory is US genome-entrepreneur Craig Venter's research team.

The J Craig Venter Institute scientists are aiming to craft a "minimal genome"- the smallest group of genes an organism needs to survive and function - and insert it into an empty cell.

This stripped-down genome has been established with the help of a simple bacterium, Mycoplasma genitalium, by knocking out its genes, one by one, until only the genetic material vital for survival was found.

Dr Venter could be on the cusp of creating life

The plan is to re-synthesise these DNA sequences from simple chemicals, stitch them together and create an artificial organism. Some believe the team may be on the cusp of doing just that.

Dr Venter's work on synthetic life is described by some as "top-down", meaning that he is taking an existing organism and changing it to create something new.

Drew Endy from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, US, says: "Venter is not creating life from scratch. "He is constructing a genome, which is more or less a slightly modified copy of an existing genome, then putting it back into an existing cell."

Dr Endy, who is working on standard building blocks, called BioBrick parts, which can be assembled to build larger biological systems, says he sees Dr Venter's work as a "genome construction project", albeit "an incredibly significant" one.

But building life from scratch, from the "bottom-up", is a challenge that some synthetic biologists have decided to take on. If you can build the biological parts, they argue, then creating something that meets the criteria for life - has a metabolism, replicates and evolves - is surely the next step.

Anthony Forster from Vanderbilt University Medical Center, Tennessee, US, says: "There has been a fair amount of talk about how you might synthesise self replication and life in a test tube, but nobody really had a detailed plan for it."

Dr Forster, along with George Church from Harvard Medical School, US, has created a "blueprint" for a synthetic cell, defining the 151 genes that they believe are needed to create life. The team is now in the process of using the blueprint to begin to piece together its prototype cell.

But what are the reasons for creating synthetic life?

Dr Venter hopes to modify genes in his new organism so that it can mop up greenhouse gases. Other tasks such organisms might be able to do include cleaning up oil spills or producing plastics. Giovanni Murtas, from the Enrico Fermi Centre, University of Rome Three, Italy, plans to build a new lifeform to look at the more fundamental question of the origins of life. "We are creating these semi-synthetic minimal cells that recall the early living cells," he says.

So far, his team has successfully built a cell system that can synthesise proteins, which is important for demonstrating that a basic metabolism can be created. Replication is the next step, he explains.

"If you want to understand more about how life was set up, then you want to recreate the principal steps for life; and you can obviously learn something new about life from using this approach," Dr Murtas tells BBC News.

Ron Weiss from Princeton University, US, who is focusing on programming biological organisms, believes the technology could also have biomedical applications. "One thing people are trying to do is to use cells as factories to make drugs or fabricate structures," he says.

New take on life

The top-down and bottom-up teams have something in common: they are mimicking what nature does already. Some scientists, though, have gone back to the drawing board in their quest to produce synthetic life. Steen Rasmussen from Los Alamos National Laboratory, US, is one of them.

"We are the radical kids on the block. We have abandoned so much of what traditional biology is doing. Many biologists view us as heretics," he says. Rather than turning to biological cell design as his starting point, Dr Rasmussen is looking to see if there might be simpler structures that he can use as the basis of his synthetic organism. He is creating a cell in which the essential parts, such as genes and metabolic chemicals, are stuck to the surface of it rather than held inside like a traditional cell.

He says: "This means you can exchange resources and waste directly with the environment and that simplifies things enormously."

Synthetic biologists think that although life created by a top-down approach may be imminent, synthetic life built from the bottom up is a few more years away - at least five to 10. However, George Atwell from Southampton University, UK, adds a word or two of caution.

"The biggest challenge is not necessarily creating life, but knowing that you have created life - doing the experiment that unambiguously tells you that you've got it," he says.

"That's because you are going to be looking at a 'soup' that contains several hundred, possibly several thousand, chemical species. How on Earth can you tell that what you have isn't just a chemical waste bottle but something that is exhibiting the signs of life?"

Nice Story

The boy and the balloons

The little black boy watched a man, blow up balloons one day.

When each balloon was filled the man, let each one float away.

The little boy watched patiently, and waved each one good-bye.

As all the pretty bright balloons, went drifting toward the sky.

asked the man if black balloons, would go up like the rest,

The man said, "Son, I'll blow one up, and put it to the test."

And when the black balloon was filled, they watched it rise and glide.

"It's not the color, son," he said, "but what you've got inside."
