A New Hope

Katherine Anne Brown© Completed March 15, 2024

The University of Salt Lake City organizes each year a "Writing for Peace Contest".

The text by Katie Brown, 18, Raelian for less than a year and daughter of Harvey Brown, was selected by the jury and will be presented at a ceremony next week and also included in the anthology published for the occasion. Her text, in which she recounts the experience of her first Happiness Academy, is very touching. Thank you, Maitreya for the hope you give to humanity!

I have been around the idea of peace and love for over the last decade of my life, but my expectations of living without the stress of society were becoming lower and lower. I had started college in August of 2023, got into a major car crash a month later—which I am still lucky to this day to be alive, and was losing my sense of self. I was emotionally, physically, and mentally becoming unstable, anchoring on to the things that kept me on my feet: my writing and my father. I was sick and depressed; I needed to find a way to get better.

I wanted freedom within my body and my mind, to break from the chains of a grief that was both mine and not my own, of physical and emotional pain that had caused my depression over the years. Losing family, trying and failing to keep close friends, and to understand why I was living on planet Earth. I wanted to leave, but I knew my life meant more than just dealing with personal problems. It was either a constant meandering of who I was without finding the answers, or going to this Happiness Academy and seeing Prophet Rael for the first time. To straddle onto a string of hope that there was something more to this life.

It was December 9, 2023, and time slowed down enough so that I could catch my bearings. I was a little on-edge to go to the Happiness Academy in Okinawa. I was already aware of what I might be getting into: over 500 people were being taught by the infamous prophet, Rael—also known as the alien prophet.

See, when I started this journey, I had no idea if this event was going to change my perspective of life, or do nothing at all. My father has had a huge history as a part of the Mormon Church, having left it after 30 years and joined the Raelian Movement. Since my early childhood, I was familiar with their idea of Raelism—there was no God, extraterrestrials (Elohim, the Creators) created life on Earth, and the goal was to make a paradise on this planet. Having not been baptized or been in the environment of church peoples, I never had a strong belief of God being real or not. This was to my advantage, meaning I had no filters in a young mind.

I wanted to understand why they said there was no God since I was always around friends who were a part of the LDS/Mormon/Christian Church, and a father who was in the higher ranks of the church in the small town of Beryl Junction, Utah. Worship God, our Lord and Savior, make tithes, repent your sins, and understand the Bible. That's how you can find peace. Ever since covid, a lot of people were leaving the Church, so obviously there was something wrong even with the philosophy of it—by religious trauma.

So why did these so-called Raelians not believe in this, but at the same time want peace on Earth? How the hell are they going to promote this idea while also spreading their atheistic philosophy, showing their controversial symbol similar to that of the Nazi's and the Star of David combined? Why did they connect the Bible to science, to extraterrestrials creating life and not evolution? What was the connection?

Many, many questions were swirling in my mind at the time, and when I entered the Happiness Academy, I hoped for at least some of them to be answered. Yes, I was unhappy, anxious, and worried about every aspect of how this would go. I was hoping to become happy, to find a place in life that wouldn't cause me to have mixed feelings. I wanted to hope that there can be peace in a world that was hateful and imbalanced.

And so I went to my first 'class.' People were introduced, mostly foreign than familiar. I had walked into an environment that I wasn't used to. People of many nationalities were smiling, hugging, mostly French greetings since a lot of people were, well, French. It took a lot of energy out of me meeting new people, so I avoided some for the first couple of days. The lectures from some Raelians were very long—so long I had to leave the room quite a few times for 'bathroom breaks.' For some of them, we meditated, such as breathing exercises and humming all as one. Mind you, 500 people did this, and it was absolutely astonishing. It was one of these moments that you had to be there to experience it.

Finally, there was Rael. There was no feeling of that push and pull, of wondering if this wasn't a good idea to be here. I, among other people, were simply there in the presence of a man who created the Raelian Movement 50 years ago. He looked each and everyone in the eye with a small, wondrous smile. There was no judgment. No fear. No turmoil. Nothing that seemed out of place. He spoke, and love like no other I'd seen hushed the audience.

Everyone's energy around me calmed and settled, like ripples on a pond smoothing out.

“Now,” Rael said softly. “Feel Infinity.”

I didn't understand what he meant at first. Didn't understand when some Raelians started tearing up, their smiles unbroken. They looked up to him with love as he did to them. He continued to speak, talking to us as if we were all having a one on one conversation. He made sure we knew that because he was the last prophet, it doesn't mean that he is better than us. We are all one, all equal, all part of Infinity.

“Infinity is you,” he said. “It is as simple as that. We are a bunch of atoms living in a bunch of atoms. And you listen, now.” We did. We heard the sigh of the wind and the waves of the ocean. It was different from what you would feel in a crowded room unlike these Raelians, or laying in your bed at night alone. This was 500 people sharing silence, sharing love. A thought came to my mind the more we listened in silence: Everything sings. He confirmed it by repeating, “Infinity is everything.”

The more he spoke, the more I understood. Like the Native American culture, where they were Mother Nature, and Mother Nature was them. You are the tree, and the tree is you. The fabric of the universe is intertwined—connected.

Humanity, one people, all divided into races, political parties, and religion, but it all has the same concept. It was fact, and it was science. You didn't believe it because it was true, you believed it because you knew. And knowing is much more powerful than belief. It's wisdom.

This is what it felt like for the rest of the week I was there. Foreign strangers became friends with a glance, a smile, or a hug. The Happiness Academy provided more than lectures; they planned for meditative exercises, both physically and mentally. One that really stood out for me was a sensual meditation where you'd massage a partner for five minutes.

You see, we live in a society where touch or even being close to a person is avoided as much as possible. In this case, feeling someone is important to health, not just because we are deprived of it, but it is also instinct. We are naturally social creatures, and this world has taken away this gift of life, hence covid in 2020. These meditations helped me break some kind of barrier I didn't know I had, and these sensual meditations really helped more than I thought.

There were evening talent shows and concerts of Raelians singing and dancing. Most notably, a group of women within the Raelian Movement call themselves Angels. These women were absolutely feminine, so beautiful and powerful—it's like they were goddesses themselves. They clothed themselves in thin silk robes, wearing headdresses of white feathers in one show, and in another, they wore so many colors they became flowers on a field. Their voices were exceptionally entrancing, so much so that everyone was in awe, including myself.

However, one show brought tears to my eyes. This was the last one of the week, and the Angels as well as other women clothed themselves in their homeland cultures, dancing as each of these cultures would. They ranged from Spanish culture to Japanese, African to Native American. I felt so empowered, so reunited with what I've been missing all along. Rael was even crying himself, and he couldn't stop himself after the show to come and talk to us. As a woman myself, his words rang warm and deep in my soul. "A peaceful future on Earth is a future led by women," he said to us. "Femininity is a remedy for mankind and the way to prevent its destruction."

I became more confident, became more comfortable being...myself. I wasn't worried about the world. I didn't care if I had a special purpose in life. Every person I saw, Raelian or not, was a friend to me. I was living in a paradise, and I didn't know at the time because I was living in the now, as Rael told us to do. There was no force, no negativity, no authority. It was freedom like I never knew existed. The love and happiness and peace I felt was so raw, so true in its form. It was as if the impossible became the possible.

I didn't want to leave the Happiness Academy. Didn't want to leave the smiles and hugs and the warm gaze everyone shared. I traveled back to the Okinawa airport, and I kept my peace and love within, smiling and recognizing each person that passed by me with a respectable nod. I departed from my fellow Raelians, saying our goodbyes, even though they didn't want to leave either.

After arriving in Tokyo, I realized how much the environment had changed, having no one in the Happiness Academy being here. The people around me had their heads down, eyes downcast, unsmiling, and a dull light in their eyes. I even told my dad how different it was already, and he nodded knowingly at me and smiled almost sadly. How much of a higher vibration I was, it was sad to see this kind of society where everyone was a stranger and not a friend.

I was at one of the departing stations to go through one of the security checks. My head was held high, looking each and everyone in the eye, wanting them to return my smile because it makes a difference, Rael had told us. Then, I saw a fellow Raelian, and I beamed. We both smiled and greeted each other, breaking the silence that had accumulated around us, everyone giving us looks as we hugged and said, "Safe travels."

But when my friend left, that was all it took. I couldn't stop the emotion from owing out of me, how disappointed I was when this society wouldn't do the same. How separate and unfriendly we were to each other. I looked at my dad, shaking my head and saying, "Wow" repeatedly because I couldn't handle it. It was all too much, and I was so, so sad.

"That's why we keep this love, Katie. This energy and life within us spread to others. To plant a seed in their mind that not all is lost," my dad said to me. I couldn't stop crying, how I could feel the others around me, stressed and depressed and angry.

So that was the purpose of the Raelian Movement. Spreading love and peace and upholding the promise to Prophet Rael that we would try to do what we could on this Earth. The Raelians' own society was a paradise compared to the society we see now. All Raelians want to make that happen here, no matter how hard it is. Of course, it may not be fulfilled, and that's what Rael reminded us. Do not force, do not worry, just be you. To be love and peace so others can feel it too.

Yes, this trip to the Happiness Academy has changed my life, and I am forever grateful for it. It has been almost 4 months now, and I have learned a lot more about our society. We're constantly overworked and depressed financially, physically, and mentally. Because I understand what it is like on both sides of the spectrum, it is more of a knowledge and an awareness than a letdown seeing what state our world is in. We had evolved to this, and through time, power, and greed, using this gift of life was slowly taken from us. The privilege to live as a simple human being became nearly lost in history.

Though there is still hope. No matter how many turns life can take, peace, love, and happiness remain. It is always there from the smallest act of kindness to our significant others. My greatest thanks is to Prophet Rael for starting this movement. It means that there is more to life than what we see at the surface. It means a new hope, and as you are still here reading this, I hope that you realize that life is worth living.

You have a purpose. And that purpose is to live.

"Everything the power of the world does is done in a circle. The life of a man is a circle from childhood to childhood. Our teepees were round like the nests of birds, and these were always set in a circle, the nation's hoop, a nest of many nests, where the Great Spirit meant for us to hatch our children." —Black Elk, Oglala Sioux

"The oneness with everything, including birth, life, and death, is an infinite cycle. We are part of this infinite cycle, [and] if you feel it every second of your life, then there is happiness forever." —Maitreya Rael.

Celebration of the First Sunday of April in Kama

On the first Sunday of April, the Ivory Coast welcomed 183 new members in the Raelian Movement, 183 people who decided to get baptized, to do what we call the Cellular Plan Transmission (CPT), in other words, to recognize the Elohim as their Creators and Rael as the Messenger of the Elohim.

Last year, during the same celebration, they only welcomed 114 new members.

Burkina Faso also welcomed 85 new members, more than twice as many as last year.

So, we asked Gyom, the leader of communication in the French-speaking countries, and Tai, the Continental Guide of Kama, what they thought had triggered such a positive reaction in Ivory Coast and Burkina Faso.

Was it related to the Netflix series?

A message from Gyom

There were indeed many CPTs in Kama, and particularly in Ivory Coast where almost two thirds of them took place. The vast majority of these CPTs were made in rural areas. In this environment, financial means are very low, therefore almost no one had access to Netflix and the latest documentary. They can't afford the "luxury" of paying a monthly subscription.

Some students have found a clever way to share subscriptions and, what's more, some of them have only seen the first episode, which is the most informative about us. The other fringe of the population that watches Netflix includes those with higher incomes, and they are in the minority.

Young Kamites watch TikTok, Facebook, YouTube and Instagram all day long, because it's free. Therefore, Xavier's interview with Ya Boni, the TikTok video of his daughters, or our Raelian Vision series can reach a larger number of people, as they are on the usual free media.

The key to our success is that Raelians went on missions all over the countryside. Most of the CPTs took place there, outside Abidjan. These missions in the countryside seem to have reached young people, who are unaware of this Netflix series. On the other hand, they are responding massively to the strategy of diffusion that shows the link between their ancestral traditions, in which there is talk of little beings from the sky, and our Creators; just as Ya Boni addressed in the interview with Xavier.

Furthermore, Maitreya’s message about the United Kingdoms of Kama and the real independence that lies ahead for Kama, the future flagship continent of humanity, is having a strong impact on the population.

Finally, more than a third of all CPTs in Ivory Coast were carried out in the north-western region, near Man, home to the famous Yacoubas tribe, who, like us, await the return of the little beings from the sky. This is why they joined us in large numbers.

This is my modest analysis of the situation.

A word from Tai

I completely agree with Gyom’s analysis.

I would simply add that in both Burkina Faso and Ivory Coast, young Guides have already been established for several years in outlying areas; small towns (county towns and sub-prefectures) and villages. In the past few months, these localities have been the focus of intense diffusion and promotion activities. The Gaoua and Diedougou region, where 70 of the 85 CPTs were carried out in Burkina Faso took place, hosted sports and leisure activities (diffusion through entertainment), the three-day mini-seminar and the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the First Encounter (with the participation of 150 Raelians) during the Easter vacations.

I would therefore say that these results stem from the successful implementation of decentralization to the regions and the management of the Raelian Movement in the Kama pioneer countries, enabling high-profile activities to be organized there with young Guides who are well established socially and professionally in the said localities.

Madagascar, Kama: a TV Show with a Bishop

Madagascar, April 78 aH (2024)

Madagascar: A TV show has been recorded in French with the Raelian Bishop Wukussa for the Cellular Plan Transmission for the Celebration of the first Sunday of April.

Burkina Faso, Kama: A raelian delegation met with the Prime Minister

On Monday, April 8, 78 aH (2024), a Raelian delegation met the Prime Minister of Burkina Faso. The delegation was composed of three Bishop-Guides from Burkina Faso: Lamane, Yaël, and Adriel. The meeting lasted half an hour, in a good atmosphere of listening, with a much-appreciated note of humor produced by the delegation.

Burkina Faso, Kama: a TV Show with a Bishop

On May 07, 2024 « Le Tribunal de l'Actualité » on 3TV (canal+ 264/TNT)

In an effort to assert greater secularism and rid the country of the cultural and religious effects of colonization, the government of Burkina Faso has decreed that May 15 will henceforth be dedicated to the celebration of traditional religious rites, and that this day will be a public holiday on the same footing as those dedicated to Christianity and Islam.

For the occasion, Lamane was invited to take part in a one-hour live broadcast on Tuesday April 7, from 8 to 9 am. The show was well followed on the “bouquet Canal+”. It was rebroadcast at 9 pm that evening and the following day. Here’s the link to their website:

The Prophet's poet is in our hearts for eternity

Our brother Kimbangu touched us all deeply, his being so delicate, so special, his radiance, his words, and above all the way he spoke of the Prophet.

I remember when this happened in Switzerland, some twenty years ago, at a meeting for Guides and Assistant Guides, on the shores of Lake Geneva. During his teaching, Maitreya explained to us that he often felt misunderstood, that when he said “apples”, people understood “pears”... After Rael had spoken, Kimbangu read one of his poems... and Rael, deeply touched, said, “There is one who has understood me.” This is what I keep today from my dear big brother and fellow National Guide.

Pierre Gary

Here is a poem written by Kimbangu who had just passed away:

“Rael, the Beloved Prophet.

What can I say about his speech? It is graceful and its content conveys the brilliance of his intelligence.

Have you ever felt the power of his words when he addresses the assembly?

And yet, he speaks to the innermost secret of our being.

He masters an art that seduces our ears with fervor and a delicate touch. His words are going straight to our heart. His speech is so simple and joyful that the sound of his voice is like fresh water on a dry land, a love song soaring in the wind.

When he talks to the other, it is like a mountain talking to a valley. He makes love meet, he inspires admiration for the beauty of life and, with pure jubilation, communicates the memory and the desire to reconnect with our Fathers.

A long time ago, we were like living dead, he gave us the strength to be living alive! In him we find peace and the example to follow, a refuge and a beacon, for he knows how to talk of the wonders of the Earth as well as the delights of the sky. His words are animated and transform our being on the narrow roads of the consciousness.

In the Raelian religion, the spirit of the Elohim is the psalm of the Creation, and the Beloved is its song.

He is a poet who versifies everything, who knocks on our door and invites us to awaken, to stand up and walk, unveiled and as bearing wings towards our encounter with the truth.

He is a mountain in fire in the dark, but also a peaceful glow beyond the hills; a storm raging against unconsciousness, but also a sweet whisper in the mist of dawn; a joyful torrent rushing from the heights to the valley to change everything in its path, but also a springtime of promises for all the coming years.

Although he knows the depths of the beauty of life, he constantly surprises us with his humor, his serenity, and his majesty! When his eyes are upon any one of us, it is as if he were looking at the first man admiring the first day of the Creation.

When we stand before him, just to greet or honor him, we feel an inexplicably imposing sensation. Perhaps too dazzled by his light, we don't know what to say, what to do; we can only be!

One cannot fool this man.

When we are alone, it is as if his fingers were on our heartstrings, and then, a great moment of happiness invades us. He is the awakening, and whether he is on stage or on the screen, when he closes his eyes, it is to better look into the eyes of his Father. He captivates us with the gentleness of his voice and the strength of his moves. He knows that to build the "visible or invisible" Embassy, he must lie down as a corner stone, and we Guides must cement ourselves around him like little pebbles.

He is a man who stands here with such majesty that he is an Embassy all by himself!

For those who have come across him or who will come across him in the midst of the tumultuous current of life, like the water in a river that flows and passes, everything or nearly everything is diluted, but at his contact, love remains and will remain imperishable in the depths of each of us.

Our Beloved Prophet is a melody that brings infinite beauty, kindness and well-being..."

Love is Gravity

In our previous issue, Maitreya spoke of gravitons in the following terms:

The love particle, the new revelation – Raelian Gathering, January 7, 78 aH (2024), Okinawa, Japan

“I will now make a revelation. Scientists will soon discover new particles that they don’t know about yet. In the same way you cannot see the photons that make light, you cannot see these particles.

In this universe, everything revolves around something else. It is true within your atoms but also with the earth that turns around the sun, and the sun that turns around the center of the galaxy. What makes all these things move in such a way? They call it attraction.

Newton discovered something that was there, but he didn’t know why the apple falls. He called it gravity. Anything you hold and let go will fall wherever you are on the Earth. Nobody knows why. It’s a particle that is responsible for it. We can call it “graviton”. Nobody knows about that; I am making a revelation. Soon, they will talk about this discovery. The whole universe is full of gravitons, which attract everything everywhere. Without gravitons, your body would disintegrate. The elements composing your hand would not stay together; they would separate...”

We suggest this development proposed by Michel Devaux last November in relation to these gravitons:

Dear Maitreya, during the Convention in Okinawa five years ago, you told us one more time, “The most important forces in the Universe are Love ; scientists call it, attraction, gravity...”. You also told us, “Love is pure energy.” Wow! What a revelation!

Scientists can’t presently imagine such a thing. Yet a French scientist, who has been involved in the study of UFOs, has proposed a new theory of gravitation based on very small “particles”.

These massless, electrically uncharged “particles” are moving (at least) at the speed of light. They are very, very small “particles”, unknown to this today, smaller than atoms, electrons or photons (for scientists, I might add, smaller than quarks or neutrinos); very small particles, without any mass, only energy; very small particles of pure energy. Scientists are talking of energy quanta; that is, pure energy, as you were telling us.

Right now, and at any given moment, a very huge quantity, an unimaginable quantity of these particles is surrounding us. The flux of these particles is on the order of billions of billions of billions of billions... of gravitational particles per second and per square meter! (10^{80} , that is 10 followed by 80 zeros, which is also the order of magnitude of the number of atoms in our observable universe!).

Gravity is everywhere. These gravitational particles are all around us, travelling through space. We are permanently in a bath of these very small particles, but we don't perceive them. We are in a gravitational bath; we are bathed in love. Everything that exists is bathed in love.

These particles are so small that they can pass through our body, our cells, our atoms (even through the nucleus of our atoms) without being perceived by us. They can also pass through the Earth, the stars, the galaxies - absolutely everything.

So, it's even more than a classical bath, because these particles are not only around us, but also inside us, each and everyone of us; around and inside everything, every atom, every cell, every object, every planet, every star. Thus, at any given moment, we are connected to every person, every plant, every animal, every star through these particles that move at the speed of light and pass through everything. We are all connected to each other and to everything through and by these gravitational particles, through and by love.

We also know that every particle is associated with a wave (of a specific length).

Therefore, this flux of gravitational particles, this flux of waves, of vibrations, connects each of us to planet Earth, to every planet, every star, every galaxy, and even to the infinitely large, permanently.

This flux of particles, this flux of waves, connects each of us to the Elohim and to all human beings living on other planets, at any moment.

This flux of particles, this flux of waves, connects each of us to the others, to every animal, every plant, every living being on Earth.

This flux of particles, this flux of waves, connects each of us to each of our cells, to the atoms of our cells, to the particles of these atoms, and even to the infinitely small.

We are connected to everything; we are connected to everybody; we are One.

We are connected to the infinitely small and to the infinitely large; we are Infinity.

We are connected by gravitational particles, by particles of love; we are Love.

These particles of love, these gravitational particles, are, moreover, probably the smallest "bricks" of all the other particles we know; photons, electrons, atoms (even neutrinos and quarks), just as we assumed that the atoms were the "bricks" of everything in the infinitely large and in the infinitely small.

So, physically, concretely, everything is made of gravity-love particles. Everything is love, infinity is love; we are love.

Maitreya told us that the brain is a powerful transmitter-receiver of waves. When we meditate, we tune our brain to the wavelength of the gravitational particles, the particles of love. We don't create love, love is everywhere, love is infinite. We simply tune our brain on the right wavelength to receive love and to re-emit love.

When we meditate, we are connected to the infinitely large and to the infinitely small, connected to the Elohim, connected to each other, connected to each of our cells. We are One, we are Infinity, we are Love.

Four additional “bonuses”

- 1) This source of energy is inexhaustible, infinite. Very soon, in a few months, a few years, we will be able to extract and offer this new energy to humanity. And this new gravitational energy is present everywhere, totally clean, CO₂-free, radioactivity-free, perfectly renewable, available at any time (even if there is no wind or sun).
- 2) This new energy will permit to easily travel beyond our solar system; this explains why Maitreya did not feel any acceleration in the spaceship to the planet of the Elohim.
- 3) This new approach could also explain telepathy.
- 4) For scientists, this new theory of gravitation also makes it possible to explain or replace “dark matter” (and the graviton) and to reconcile quantic physics and general relativity for the first time (and many other unexplained phenomena in astrophysics).

Comments about the “bonuses”

- 1) Energy

“Our highly developed atomic energy is almost inexhaustible, especially since we have discovered a way to use the atom in a closed circuit ...”, (Intelligent Design, p.110)

Gravitational energy can be understood as “highly developed atomic energy”, because gravitational particles were not known when the Messages were published (just as television, in the Messages, has to be understood as the Internet).

Yes, this gravitational energy is “inexhaustible”, present everywhere, available at any time, totally renewable, CO₂-free, radioactivity-free.

Yes, gravitational energy will be used on Earth “in a closed circuit”, because when gravitational energy, that can be extracted everywhere, is produced, a part of this energy is used (to produce electricity, to propel cars, etc.) and some is re-injected “in a closed circuit” and used to extract gravitational energy again, and so on.

This inexhaustible energy can be found everywhere. By offering free energy to every nation, we will give the opportunity for developing countries to achieve a high standard of living; and for the developed countries to stop wars over energy needs.

- 2) Space travel beyond our solar system:

- “At the same time that you discover powerful energy sources allowing you to travel beyond your own solar system.” (Intelligent Design, p.151).

Gravitational energy solves many problems and will permit to easily travel beyond our solar system:

- Acceleration of hundreds of g (as observed with UFOs) will be possible without lethal effect on astronauts (only acceleration below 10 g is acceptable for astronauts in our current spacecrafts) and even without any feeling of acceleration.

- A huge quantity of fuel is no longer required. In fact, no fuel is needed in the spacecraft, since the gravitational energy to propel it can be extracted at anytime, anywhere in space.
- Cosmic radiation, potentially lethal to astronauts, is repelled all around the spacecraft by the (anisotropic) flux of gravitational particles (the gravitational particle “wind”).

- UFO (or spacecraft) acceleration without any feeling of acceleration

A basic rule of this new approach to gravitation is that, for any accelerated object, an anisotropic flux (“a wind”) of gravitational particles is associated; and, conversely, at any anisotropic flux of gravitational particles, every object in this flux is accelerated.

Therefore, when a train, a plane, or a spacecraft is accelerated by electricity, fuel, or hydrogen combustion, an anisotropic flux of gravitational particles is associated with the accelerated train, plane or spacecraft, and you feel this acceleration.

When the train, the plane or the spacecraft is accelerated by an anisotropic flux of gravitational particles (and not by electricity, fuel or hydrogen), an anisotropic flux of gravitational particles is also associated with the accelerated train. However, this induced anisotropic flux of gravitational particles will have the same intensity and occurs instantaneously, at the same time as the anisotropic flux propelling the spacecraft, but in the opposite direction. For the passengers, the induced flux of gravitational particles exactly compensates and cancels the flux of particles responsible for propulsion. As a result, they feel no acceleration.

A corollary is that with conventional acceleration, a human being cannot sustain an acceleration of more than 10 g without dying, which limits the speed of the spacecraft.

With acceleration from gravitational particles, the spacecraft can accelerate to hundreds of g without risk to passengers (as with UFOs, whose acceleration of hundreds of g has been observed and measured by radar).

3) Possible explanation for telepathy

We know (as explained in the Messages and by science) that a thought is an electro-chemical phenomenon in our brain. There is an acceleration of electrons between neurons, therefore an anisotropic flux of gravitational particles, a thought that is emitted by our brain with a specific wavelength. This thought, this wave, this anisotropic flux of gravity-love particles can travel through any matter, at any distance. Another brain is potentially able of picking up this thought, which is in fact an anisotropic flux of gravitational particles with a specific wavelength.

This is a possible and probable basic explanation for telepathy.
